Christian Cory
— INSTRUCTOR —

MY BACKGROUND

Christian Cory is a former homicide detective and investigations commander with over 19 years in law enforcement, including Patrol, Sex Crimes, Homicide, and a decade as a Crisis Negotiator. He led investigations at a large municipal agency, overseeing major cases—including homicides and officer-involved incidents—with consistently high clearance rates.

After conducting thousands of interviews, his work now focuses on one core principle: effective information gathering. He holds degrees in Criminology and Forensic Psychology and is a National Institute of Justice LEADS Scholar, Executive Fellow with the National Policing Institute, and Co-Director of Project Aletheia. His instruction translates evidence-based interviewing research into practical methods that work on real cases.
